EUROPEAN FISH PRICE REPORT

15 February 2002 – No. 02/2002

LATEST TRENDS IN THE EUROPEAN MARKET

On 25 January 2002, the EU Standing Veterinary Committee has agreed on the suspension of imports of selected products of animal origin from China. The main fish product affected by this decision is shrimp. A recent mission of the EU's Food and Veterinary Office (FVO) revealed serious deficiencies in the Chinese residue control system and problems related to the use of banned substances in the veterinary field. The Commission will re-examine the situation together with Member States before the end of February and will work with the Chinese authorities in view of the implementation of the necessary measures to allow the outset of trade.

GROUND FISH: Fish prices are low in the Netherlands, especially for plaice. On the contrary, cod prices are high. Some fishing boats remained in port due to fish quotas. This situation is expected to last for at least ten weeks..... Page 3

FLAT FISH: Demand for turbot is expected to remain stable at a weak level. Therefore, no major price changes are foreseen. Both farmed and wild turbot supplies are quite good..... Page 6

TUNA/PELAGICS: January tuna catches have been generally very low for the season, consisting mainly of yellowfin in the Indian Ocean and of almost 100% of yellowfin in the Atlantic Ocean. Consequently, skipjack landings are poor, with the exception of Ghana. Spanish canneries - having received about 30 000 MT of tuna in January and fish from the Indian, Atlantic and Eastern Pacific Oceans at the beginning of February - are covered for this month, except for skipjack. Similarly, Italian canneries - which are covered even for March - are not pressed to buy, even though loin supplies are expected to be critical. It is too early to predict whether the market supply will be more balanced in the near future. The satellite remote inspection showed very large cold patches in sea waters off the Atlantic and Eastern Pacific equatorial areas, while the Indian Ocean was recently heavily disturbed by storms. Yellowfin prices are stable and are expected to increase if catches decrease. Skipjack prices clearly tend to increase. European canneries prices are much higher compared to a year ago... Page 8

MACKEREL/HERRING: The market conditions are difficult. Prices are high due to the short supply coupled with the low currency values in the EU, Poland and Japan. Demand is good for herring > 300 gr/pc and for mackerel > 600 gr/pc..... Page 9

CEPHALOPODS: Catches are becoming poor and prices are increasing. In Morocco, the biological stop began on 1st February and will last for three months this time. The new catches for the European market should be available at the beginning of July..... Page 10

SHRIMP: Residues of chloramphenicol were found in samples of shrimp imported from China. It is a powerful, broad-spectrum antibiotic drug, which has been banned for use in food producing animals in the EU since 1994. Its presence in food creates potential risks to human health. The EU ban on shrimp from China opens the way for shrimps from other sources like Thailand..... Page 11

LOBSTER: Out of season; no changes. Page 13

BIVALVES/NON TRADITIONAL SPECIES:..... Page 14

SHARK/FRESHWATER FISH: Demand for tilapia remained steady during the month of January but is now slightly decreasing. Page 15

SALMON/TROUT: Salmon prices are increasing slightly. New minimum prices are under discussion at the moment between the European Community and Norway. The trout market is stable and prices tend to increase due to the lack of supply. Page 16

SEABASS/SEABREAM: The European market remains oversupplied. However, in Greece, there is a slight decrease in seabass prices for sizes 200-300, 300-450 and 450-600 gr/pc but a price increase for sizes >600gr/pc. Price increases on the Portuguese market range from 32% to 68%. Similarly, seabream prices are decreasing in Greece and increasing in Portugal..... Page 17
